MOTT: from front

lieved in me and invested into me along the way. I owe it to my city to show that being black is beautiful and we can do absolutely anything we put our mind to."

Mott serves as chairperson for Civic Engagement at the Hamilton County Chattanooga NAACP Chapter. She spent months working closely with NAACP President Ann Jones-Pierre and other NAACP Executive Board Members to bring awareness to American Rescue Plan dollars awarded to the city and county for the economic repair of the underserved black community.

One of her other priorities is the displacement of Black Chattanoogaans out of the city, which has sparked further conversation into solutions for gentrification.

Mott ran unsuccessfully against incumbent Anthony Byrd in the March 2021 race for Chattanooga's

District 8 City Council seat. She is one of three people who have picked up papers to run in the Aug. 9 election for the seat which came open Feb. 1 when Mayor Tim Kelly appointed Councilman Byrd as City Court clerk.

"Thank you to my beloved parents, family and the Harvard alumni that encouraged my candidacy and journey." Mott said. "I cannot wait to learn, network with young emerging leaders from all over the world and walk the same campus as the ancestor W.E.B. DuBois. This is for all of us, and I want to come back home with vital information we need to inspire a new generation of leaders in Chattanooga."
