The ideology of 'white supremacy' has no place in America. President Joe Biden and first lady Jill Biden traveled to Buffalo on Tuesday and laid flowers on the makeshift memorial near TOPS market. After visiting the area near Saturday's mass shooting, in which 10 people died and three were injured, they met privately with relatives of the victims.

Lady Dr. Jill Biden were in Buffalo, White House press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre on Tuesday blasted unnamed public figures for pushing the racist so-called "replacement theory," saying they "should be ashamed of themselves."

For a second consecutive day, Jean-Pierre refused to name names

The Bidens then spoke emotionally to a large crowd, which included victims' family members, lawmakers, and numerous media. President Biden offered words of comfort to the families and friends of the shooting victims.

President Biden also addressed the issue of hate, racism and gun violence that has become all too common in America. Biden condemned those who spread white supremacist lies "for power, political gain and for profit". The US president was close to tears as he recalled the victims' lives, then became angry as he described forces of hatred that have haunted his administration.

He called the buffalo shooting a murderous, racist rampage. America's President then said "In America, evil will not win, I promise you." "Hate will not prevail and white supremacy will not have the last word."
